Friends of the Election Conspirators Never Heard of Them Doing Wrong.

Counselman and Sullivan's Testimony Opens the Way for a Close Cross-Examination-Bernhamer and Coy Are to Testify.

THE CONSPIRACY TRIAL.

Character Evidence and the Testimony of

Sullivan and Counselman,

There was a fair crowd in attendance at the United States Court when the conspiracy trial was resumed yesterday morning-probably the largest at any time since the case has been up. This increase in attendance was no doubt due to the report that Coy and Bernhamer were to be put on the stand. They, however, were not in the room when Judge Woods entered and the marshal rapped for order, Bernhamer not having reached the city from his new home in the north part of the State, and the defense not being ready for Coy's testimony. The first witnesses called were several persons to testify to the good reputation of the defendants. They were Gen. Fred Kneffer for Sullivan, and Spaan, H. Bamberger, Peter Gramling, L. F. Adams, Henry Laut, Daniel Monninger and J. Q. Van Winkle, for Sullivan alone, and W. O. Patterson for Budd, and Peter Gramling for Counselman's character. A number of others, during the morning, went through the formality of saying that the various defendants were all of good reputation and sound character.

Dan Lemon, inspector of the first precinct of the Twelfth ward, was the first witness that testified in regard to the events of the election. He denied having suggested that McGlynn's papers should be changed. He also denied having met Baker on the stairway in the court-house and then turning and going down Washington street to Steve Mattler's saloon, as John W. Bowlus testified. He did not remember the circumstance, and was positive he had not done so.

Mr. Claypool-Do you drink, Mr. Lemon? Witness--Sometimes. Mr. Claypool-In campaigns quite often?

Witness-Well, occasionally. Mr. Claypool-Mr. Lemon, you state to this jury, a year and a half after this event is alleged to have taken place, that you distinctly remember that you did not go in and take a drink in Mattler's saloon with Baker, as appears in testimony. Your recollection is a certainty on that point, is it?

Witness-Yes, sir. Mr. Claypool-That's all. A good recollection

Mike McGlynn, inspector of the second precinct, Fourteenth ward, said that he met Dan Lemon at the canvassing-board, who showed him that there was something wrong with his papers. Lemon told him to show them to Sam Perkins, whom he also met at the court-house the day the canvassing board was in session. Perkins told him that there was some defect in the papers; that the poll-book certificate was not written out, and asked bim to go over to his (Perkins's) office and investigate it. Witness and Perkins did so, when Perkins sat down at a table and began writing in his poll-book. Witness said to him, "Stop; no man can change my tally-papers." He denied that Lemon or O'Neil had in any way made a proposition to add votes in favor of anybody to his sheet, and said: "It wouldn't have done them any good if they had. I wouldn't have allowed it. After this he returned to court-house and his precinct was counted from the tally-sheets." George A. Reese, a saloon-keeper, who was clerking for Mattler in 1887, said that Perkins clerking for Mattler in 1887, said that Perkins came into Mattler's saloon one morning and demanded some money of him, to which he [Mattler] returned: "I've got my tamily and my business to support, and I can't give you any." Perkins then said: "I'll do you up for that, Steve." On cross-examination witness said he did not hear any of the conversation between the two men but this, though he was standing at the time in a very few feet of them, not over four or five feet. He remembered this much, nothing more.

At this point some more testimony as to good character of the defendants was introduced, Wm. B. Burford and Edward Foster for Dr. Metcalf; D. C. Pierce, Joe Van Flack, J. S. Berrybill and F. B. Messick for Sulivan; Albert Coffin for Counselman; J. S. Berrybill and James W. McGinnis for Budd.

Judge Claypool-You say you are acquainted with Mr. Budd, Mr. McGinnis? Witness—Yes, air. I first met him some years ago at Acton camp-meeting. [Laughter.]
Mr. Claypool—Met him at Acton!
Witness—Yes, we were both tenting there.

Mr. Claypool—You kept up your camp-meeting acquaintance, did you, and have been intimate with him since?

Witness-Well, not exactly. I cut loose from the camp-meeting soon after. Daniel Burton, inspector second precinct, Tweifth ward, said that he was in Room 59 the day the canvassing board met. He went there for the purpose of seeing Smith Meyers. Sim Coy met him at the door, and Perkins and some other man whom he did not know were in there. Witness denied that he had said, as Perkins alleges, "My God, this is no place for me." On cross-examination he said that Perkins was sitting at the table writing when he went in, but couldn't say what he was writing on. Witness remained only half a minute, and did not leave because he thought it was no place for him, but because he had no business there.

Dr. C. N. Metcalf, one of the defendants, was next on the stand. He denied ever having met

Perkins at the court-house where Perkins asked him to secure some acid for Coy. He never went with him to witness's office, and never made any experiments with acid as alleged. He never knew anything about any scheme to change tally-sheets, and was not cognizant of any fraud whatever. His denial applied to every particular incident with which his name has been connected. has been connected. The interest of the afternoon session began with the testimony of John H. Counselman, inspector second precinet, Fourth ward, and one of the defendants. "I went to the canvassng board at 10 o'clock the day it met," he said. ing board at 10 o'clock the day it met," he said.

"Abel Davis, the Republican judge, gave me the papers of my ward there. He had taken them the day before, having shown as authority for doing it a circular from General Carnahan. My papers were first handed in shortly after dinner. They were rejected by Bernhamer on account of an informality and handed back to me. I went back after I had gotten a lunch and stayed all afternoon. Then I went home and got my supper and then came back and stayed all evening. In the evening sometime I went across the street time I went across the street and took a couple! of drinks with William Cook and Austin Bradley. I was somewhat full that evening, and going to northeast corner of the room where the board met, I fell asleep, and was waked up late in the night to give in my returns. I presented them as soon as I could. Mr. Elam was raising a great fuss there, and wanted to know where I got those papers. I said I got them from Abel Davis, a Republican judge. No person took them from me that night to make any change in them. never knew of any changes in my papers until next morning. I never made or consented to having made any changes on my tally-sheets, nor did I know of any purpose to make any

On cross-examination he said: "I was so in-toxicated when my papers were taken up that I idn't know what I was about " Judge Claypool-And yet you remember that you said to Mr. Elam that you got your papers from a Republican judge!
Witness—Yes, sir. I do not remember that Henry Spaan said snything to me at that time.

Judge Claypool—Did you know that it was your duty to keep those papers safely?

Witness—I was not perfectly clear on that. do not know now what my duties were in that Judge Claypool-Were your papers out of your possession that evening? Witness-No, sir. Judge Claypool-Who made the changes on Witness-I do not know.

Judge Claypool - Will you explain to this jury how those changes were made; will you give any solution whatever, any theory that you have Witness-I don't know gentlemen. Judge Claypool-You drank at 10 o'clock, his jury and put them in his pocket. "I know of an agreement," he continued. "not to indict Perkins; that Captain Ritter was there as an

Perkins; that Captain Ritter was there as an especial prosecutor, and that Perkins had agreed to testify to certain facts.

Mr. Sellers—And yet, knowing this agreement as you did, knowing that Captain Ritter was there to investigate the matter, you prepared some questions to ask in direct violation of the agreement.

Mr. Matthews—Yes sir.

Mr. Sellers—Had you ever before prepared such questions, or did you ever afterward in any case!

The Witness-No, sir.
Mr. Sellers-You heard the testimony of all these witnesses when you were on the grand jury as foreman—Schmidt, Corbaley, Counsel-man and all the others, and saw the forged tally-sheets, knew that there was something wrong and yet in face of all this testimony you failed to return an indictment against these men? Witness-Yes, sw.

Mr. Sellers, contemptuously-Gentlemen, take The testimony following this was without ineldent or freshness until John E. Sullivan was called. When he testified there were at least 100 persons in the room, all of whom pressed up a little closer toward the jury to get a good hearing. "I was at the canvassing board from morning till 12 o'clock at night," Sullivan said: "I was sure I had been elected until Thursday morning, when some of my friends came to me and said my vote was close and that the Reand said my vote was close and that the Republicans would try to count me out. I thereupon got Henry Spaan to look after my interest. I did not say to Perkins to get Farrell's papers as I wanted to have some changes made for my friends. I had no knowledge of any scheme to count anybody out, did not know of any fraud or any purpose to change any tally-sheets. I had a conversation with Baker in the judge's private room, as has been testified to by other witnesses. We were conversing about other witnesses. We were conversing about some matters pertaining to the election. This talk, however, had no relation whatever to the count. I never saw Mr. Schmidt, whose papers had been changed and who said that he left them with George Budd at my instigation until 10 o'clock at night, when Schmidt's papers were called. I never saw him until the next morning after the board adjourned to talk about the matter. He came to me and said that be wanted me to help him out of a little trouble and asked me if I was not the man that he gave his papers to. I said that I was not, that he was mistaken. When I told him that he turned and said some-thing in German to a friend that accompanied him. That was about all that was said at the time. At 12 o'clock I went home and don't know anything about the rest of the count."

When Judge Claypool began the cross-examination, Mr. Sullivan shifted his position in his chair two or three times in an uneasy manner, as if anticipating something was coming, and it was. Judge Claypool said, "There has been something said in this trial about some one being a professional bondsman, Perkins, I think.
Now we will see if we can't find some one else in the same business." He then ran his finger down in his vest pocket and drew out a small piece of paper, on which he had a little memoranda, and the examination began. The first question was, "Mr. Sullivan are you acquainted with Frank Myers?"

Witness-I can not recall him now.

Judge Claypool-Do you remember having gone on his bond once for the payment of a fine!

Witness—I do not remember.

Judge Claypool—Did you not go on his bond and is not that fine unpaid to this day, and have you not been asked several times about it, and did you not curse the officers once when they came to collect it?

Witness-I do not recall any such case. Judge Claypool then went through the same question in regard to a man named Joseph Bailey, concerning whose case Mr. Sullivan likewise responded that he knew nothing definite. "Are you acquainted with Thomas Galvin, and did you ever go on his bond, and is not the amount of it still standing against you to-day?" continued Judge Claypool. To these questions Mr. Sullivan responded either in the negative or that he did not remember. Judge Claypool then asked witness if there was not at the present day a fine standing against him for $23.50 for some offense of which he had been found guilty several years ago, and whether or not he had been called upon repeatedly to pay it, but had not done so. Witness denied that such was the case. The attorney then presented a petition of Mrs. Minnie Davis to Judge Ayres, in the matter of the estate of Minnie Hirth, her mother, which had been filed in the clerk's office on the 16th of December last. This petition sets forth the fact that Mrs. Hirth is a person of unsound mind, that there is deposited with the clerk of Marion Circuit Court of her money about $2,000 that has been lying idle over a year because no guardian has been appointed, and in conclusion asks that Robert M. Harter be appointed guardian to take charge of this money. Witness was asked if such a petition had been filed in his office. Sullivan, after looking at the filing-mark on the back of petition, replied that it had.

Judge Claypool—Will you state to the court whether Henry N. Spaan did or did not file a counter-petition to this one?

Witness-I do not know. Judge Claypool then asked Mr. Sullivan whether he had anything to do with having George W. Budd, a clerk in his office, appointed George W. Budd, a clerk in his office, appointed as guardian of Mrs. Hirth in order that the money might be retained in his (Sullivan's) possession, and whether he knew that Budd was appointed at one time as Mrs. Hirth's guardian. To these questions Mr. Sullivan replied in the negative. Judge Claypool then presented the following note to Mr. Meyer, the attorney who had filed the petition asking for the appointment of a guardian in Mrs. Hirth's case. The note was written in a man's hand and signed by Mrs. Minnie Davis: Mr. D. Meyer: As I have made other arrangements about the guardian of my mother's estate, you will please not present the petition to the judge, and your service is no longer required. MRS. MINNIE DAVIS.

Judge Claypool-I will ask you if you know that hand-write? Witness-I do not. the hand-writing of George W. Budd, who is one of your deputies?

Witness-No, sir.

Judge Claypool-Are you acquainted with Mr.

Budd's hand-writing? Witness-I cannot say that I am.

Judge Claypool-Do you know whose hand-writing that is on the back of that petition marking the date it was filed in your office? Witness-No, sir, I do not. Judge Claypool—You tell this jury, then, that you know nothing about this case. Nothing about who wrote that note. Nothing about Mr. Spaan filing a counter-petition or any thing of the kind. To which the witness replied in the pegative. At this point the court adjourned for The cross-examination of Mr. Sullivan will be resumed at 9 o'clock this morning. At its conclusion Sim Coy and Bernhamer will be put on the stand. During the day yesterday between the important witnesses a number of persons were put on the stand to testify to the good reputation of each of the defendants.

Bernhamer's Arrival

Bernhamer was brought down from the Northern Prison yesterday by deputy United States Marshal Taylor. The train arriving here at 4 o'clock in the afternoon was waited for by a motley crowd, but the convict recognized no one, as the officer hastily took him through the ladies' room to the hack-stand. Getting into a carriage Bernhamer was taken to the jail. The first man to greet him was Sim Coy, who was lounging in the turnkey's office. The two shook hands, but neither Coy nor Bernhamer threw any warmth into the meeting, the former merely saying. "How are you Bernhamer?" and the latter replying in like terms. Prison life has had a remarkable effect on the president of the notorious Democratic canvassing board. On the way down he referred to nothing in connection with the case, did not talk about Coy or himself. Now and then he would inquire of the deputy marshal as to the distance of town and stations, but aside from that he spent his time in reading the Journal and Chicago papers which he bought on the train. He shows in the pallor which all prisoners have, the effect of confinement, but otherwise, his health is good. He will go upon the witness stand to-day. a motley crowd, but the convict recognized no

There were no decisions rendered by the United States Supreme Court, yesterday. was stated by an officer of the court that a decision in the Coy-Bernhamer habeas corpus case, from Indianapolis, will be rendered on Monday next, the last day of the term, when court adjourns to September, and when dicisions will be made in all cases which have been argued.

A BUDGET OF LITIGATION. The Interminable Wren Case Before a Spe-

The long-pending damage suit of Thomas Wren against the city of Indianapolis was put on trial in Judge Howe's room, Superior Court, yesterday, before S. O. Pickens, sitting as spe-Judge Claypool—You drank at 10 o'clock, were drunk at 11, and went and laid down and slept until 3 o'clock, when you were yet drunk! Witness—Yes, sir, that is it.

Judge McNutt—Were you in the habit of drinking? Had you ever drunk as much as four glasses of beer in that time before?

Witness—Never in my life.

Harvey Matthews, foreman of the Marion county grand jury, from January to July, 1887, said on cross-examination that he prepared some questions to ask Perkins when he was before cial judge. The amount demanded by Wren is way by the City Council. The case has been on the dockets for twenty-one years. It has been tried several times and has been once in the Supreme Court.

Trial for Arson. The second trial of John Stuil, indicted jointly with J. J. Hilton for buffling the residence of his sister, Mattie Reid, at No. 80 South Tennessee street, in April, 1886, is being delayed, on account of the absence of some of the prose-Driscoll, who was living with the Reid woman when the fire occurred, and who testified on the former trial that nearly all the valuables were removed before the house burned. Three months ago she married an advance agent for an opera troupe, and is now in Chicago. There is an indictment hanging over her for larceny, and Prosecutor Mitchell says that unless she returns promptly he will have her brought back on a requisition. A jury to try the case was secured last evening, and the case then went over until this morning. George A. Adams and George W. Grubbs, of Martinsville, are appearing for the defendant. The first trial resulted in a disagreement of the jury, eight being in favor of conviction and four for acquittal. Stull is at large on a $1,500 bond. cution's witnesses. The ope most desired is Eva is at large on a $1,500 bond.

Transferred to the Purchasers. A decree was entered in the United States Court, yesterday, authorizing the transfer of the L. D. & S. railroad property to the new company, the I., D. & W., for which a purchasing committee bought the road at the late sale. The committee paid into the court $29,849.32 in cash, and $50,000 in receiver's certificates. The $2,400,000 second mortgage bonds are held subject to the further orders of the court.

Postponed Until September. The quo warranto suit of Attorney-general Michener for the removal of the trustees of the Insane Asylum came up before Judge Howe, yesterday morning, and the issues were joined. The case had been set for trial on the 21st of this month, but as it seemed impossible to reach it, an agreement was made by which it goes over until after the summer vacation of the court. It will be the first case on the docket at the September term.

Examining a New Ballot-Box. The County Commissioners yesterday examined a new ballot-box, manufactured by a Michigan company, which it is claimed cannot be stuffed without detection. Chairman Taggart, of the Democratic county committee, thought the board ought to buy the boxes, but the members did not seem anxious to be responsible for

Notes from the Courts. During the progress of the Wren case Judge Howe will hold court in the witness-room of the Criminal Court. James Sullivan, arrested for selling liquor on Sunday, has taken a change of venue from the Mayor to 'Squire Walpole. Alfred H. Wiley and James C. Meyers have been appointed administrators of the estate of the late Jeremiah N. Pollard, of Pike township.

They each gave bond for $2,000. The Superior Court met in general term yes-terday morning, and confirmed the judgment of Abner Hyde against the Eel River & Western Railway Company for $6,000 for services.

Allen Jennings has been cited to appear before 'Squire Judkins, on an assault charge preferred by Hester Holland. The difficulty arose over the sale of a sewing-machine on the installment plan. The case will be tried Thursday. Judge Taylor yesterday heard the petition of Henry Winters to be relieved as the guardian of Christina Schmidt, the daughter of Charles Schmidt. The father of the girl has been annoying Winter by several suits, on account of the guardianship, and he is becoming tired of the trust. The Judge will rule on the petition

The county grand jury met yesterday morning, and began work by taking up the jail cases. At the request of the police, it will also investigate a good many saloon-keepers, who, it is claimed, have been violating the Sunday law regularly. The tally-sheet forgery cases are still pending before the jury, but there doesn't seem to be much likelihood that they will ever be reported upon. The Court Record.

He Appreciates Young Men. A young Democrat said, yesterday morning: "I don't believe we can down the Republicans in the county this fall. They have too many young men interested in politics this year. It made me feel sick, a year ago last fall, when so many of them were hustling for John L. Griffiths. knew he would be elected, and was surprised that his majority was not much larger. Now they nominate Lee Fulmer for sheriff, and cap the climax by nominating Harry Tineher for prosecutor. This means that the young Republicans are appreciated, and will hustle, which is equivalent to their election. Nearly every year we Democrate can pick the Republican nominees to pieces and spring a scheme to beat them, but we can't do it this fall. The present nominees are too young and don't belong to any machine, and we can't fight them on being corrupt. The and we can't light them on being corrupt. The only complaint we can make against Fulmer or Tincher, or any of the young men who are going to run for office this fall, is that they are Republicans. I have forgiven Tincher for this, and as I want to be on the winning side this year, I will vote for Harry. You needn't ask me to vote for any other Republican, as I am a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat."

Exhibit of American Art. On Wednesday night occurs the opening of the art exhibit, at 31 South Meridian street. It promises to be the best exhibit yet given here, and it is stated in New York that the pictures collected there for it are far superior to any that have been sent out from that city. The exhibit will be on the ground floor. The painters represented are the best in America. The works of only one or two foreigners will be found in the exhibition. R. Cleveland Coxe sends two works, "A Marine Harbor" and "A Misty Morning in Gloucester. F. K. N. Rehn sends water-colors, one a "Morning in Mid-ocean," and another, "Summer Evening." Henry Farrar will have three works in the exhibit, and H. Bolton Jones, Barr H. Nicholls, Harry Eaton, W. H. A Grand Army Camp-Fire. The last of the series of camp-fires given by Geo. H. Thomas Post, will be held this evening at the post hall.

Papers will be read by Comrades Gid B Thompson and Derk DeRuiter, the subjects being "Guerrilla Land" and "The March to the Sea." There will be vocal music by Miss Annie L. Abromet, with piano accompaniment by Miss Clara Bretz; also violin solo by Miss Annie T. Sickels, accompanied by Miss Direc Robson. Mrs. M. C. Tyndall will give recitations.
